

Miss Margaret Horsburgh

Melvor Times

17 September 1869

DEATH.— Within a short period death has been extremely busy in this locality, nor are the ravages of the enemy confined principally to the full extremes of life, infancy and old age, but on the contrary, the young, the fair, and promising ones have been selected by fate as the victims.

It is not many days since the family of Dr. Horsburgh, of Whroo, was called on to mourn the loss of his daughter Margaret, a nice, amicable young lady, up till recently in the apparent enjoyment of good health.

The Whroo cemetery register has a Margaret Horsburgh, buried 14 May 1893, understood to be the mother of this Margaret.
