

Mrs Elizabeth Taylor

Waranga Chronicle

11 November, 1875

It is our painful duty to have to record the death, from diphtheria, of the wife of Mr. H. Taylor, farmer, residing at Bailieston. The deceased, who had been nursing one of her children who was and is still suffering from the same disease, and was weak from constant watching, was first attacked on Thursday, and such was the rapid progress it made that notwithstanding all that was done to stay it, death took place within three days from the time the first symptoms appeared.

Mrs. Taylor was a resident in this district for some eighteen years, during which period she gained the goodwill and respect of all who were acquainted with her, for her virtues were many.

The remains were interred in the Whroo cemetery on Tuesday last.

Cemetery records include Elizabeth Craigie Taylor, buried November 1875, aged 40 years.
